Crippling Spring Snows, Bring Threat of Flood

By United Press

Spring snows that partially crippled power and transportation facilities from Maine to southern Pennsylvania today threatened several northeastern areas with floods.

The freak snowstorm driven by winds up to 50 miles an hour blew into the northeast late Saturday and dumped up to two feet of wet snow in several areas.

A Weather Bureau forecast of seasonally warm temperatures threatened many areas with floods when the melting snow fills rivers and streams.

More than 60 families were evacuated yesterday from their homes in the flood-plagued area near Baldwinsville, N. Y., when the Seneca river overflowed its banks north of Syracuse. The area was blanketed with about six inches of wet snow over the weekend, which raised the total snowfall for the winter to a record 146½ inches.

The Weather Bureau today warned residents near Catskill Mountain streams to be on the alert for flooding today and tomorrow when the run-off is expected to begin.

The Mohawk river in central New York was expected to be bank-full in the next 48 hours. The Chenango river was reported at its highest since 1937.

The storm caused at least six deaths and hampered an air sea search for three marine fliers missing since Saturday night.

The 2.7 inch snowfall was New York City's heaviest since 9.5 inches fell on April 9, 1947. Temperatures above freezing rapidly turned it into slush yesterday. Streets outside Manhattan were full of puddles and miniature streams.

New England and the Catskill mountain area suffered the heaviest snowfalls. Central and Western Massachusetts received up to 12 inches of snow and Boston reported three inches. Some 100,000 Boston residents were without power for varying periods during the storm.

Below freezing temperatures halted at least temporarily threats other persons died in Boston after land, where streams had been rising steadily as earlier snows melted. The Windsor Locks Weather Bureau said all streams in the Connecticut river watershed, including Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, would fall considerably by Tuesday, barring rain.

Three of the six storm deaths were in New England. Rudolph Perreault, 49, died in Nashua, N. H., while shoveling snow. Two other persons died in Boston after shoveling snow.

Charles Yost, 64, of Elmhurst, N. Y. and Henry Carpinilli, 65, of South Ozone Park, N. Y. Both died after shoveling snow. Arthur Andrews, 26, was found dead of exposure in Mattituck.

An all out air-sea search of coastal New York waters resumed today for a twin-engine Beechcraft plane missing since Saturday with three Marine officers aboard.

The three, 2nd Lt. Robert Dietz Jamataca, N. Y., Capt. T. Untermeyer, the pilot, of St. Louis; and 1st Lt. E. M. Simms of Providence, R. I. were enroute to Floyd Bennett Field here from Glenview, Ill. They were last heard from at 8:12 p.m. Saturday between Red Bank and Sandy Hook, N. J. The storm hampered the search for the missing plane yesterday, but helicopters, planes and coast guard cutters resumed the search today.

Guernsey Seniors to Stage Play

The Senior Class of Guernsey will present a play entitled, "Elusive Bachelor," Friday, April 13, at 8:00 in the school auditorium. A matinee performance will be given Friday afternoon at 1:00.

The play centers around action at a hotel resort called Elm Arbor operated by a middle aged woman and her three nieces. Just when business seems to be going on the rocks a famous movie actress and well-known newspaper reporter come to Elm Arbor. Business is just beginning to boom when a young playwright and his valet appear; They are mistaken for crooks and trouble arises. Things start to happen quick and continue right up to the exciting climax.

The characters of the play are as follows: Dean Black, Jackie Neil Cleaver, Thomas Lockard, Mary Ann Thompson, Betty Joe Erwin, Dorothy Lamb, Barbara Peyton, Jimmy Peyton, Wanzelle Cornelius, and Gilbert Collins. Admission will be 15, 25, and 35 cents. Admission for the matinee will be 10 and 20 cents. Busses will run.

Appeals Sentence for Spanking Death

BEAUFORT, N. C. (AP)—Marine Sgt. James R. Houseman, 23, has given notice he will appeal the prison sentence he got for the spanking death of his infant son. A Carteret County grand jury deliberated 30 minutes Saturday afternoon before finding Houseman of Joinder, Ark., guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the death of his 29-day-old son on Feb. 25. He was sentenced to seven to 10 years.

Houseman testified at his trial that he did not remember spanking the child. The last thing he remembered, he told the court, was placing the infant across his knee to "burp" him.

He pleaded innocent on grounds of "temporary insanity."

Rabies Brings Quarantine in Two Sections

By The Associated Press

Animal quarantines were ordered in two Arkansas cities today in an effort to prevent an outbreak of rabies.

At Jonesboro, Mayor Herbert Sanderson ordered a 10-day quarantine, effective tomorrow, for all dogs or cats in the city.

A similar quarantine was ordered at Russellville by Polk County Coroner A. B. Tate.

The Jonesboro quarantine came after a dog and a cat were diagnosed as diseased with rabies. The dog which died at an animal clinic, was not believed to have bitten anyone. The cat, however, attacked Mrs. Ray Hatcher as she worked in her yard. She now is undergoing anti-rabies treatment.

Mayor Sanderson said police would pick up all dogs and cats found running loose, and kill animals that are not tagged.

A skunk found to be with rabies at Russellville today was the second such animal found in the area since March 22. A diseased skunk was found earlier at nearby Dover. It had bitten several dogs. Marked Tree only recently lifted an animal quarantine.

Body of Small Girl Found on Vacant Lot

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A suitcase lying amid shrubs, geraniums and weeds on a vacant lot was the resting place for the body of 4-year-old Susan Shaw.

Detectives were led to the spot yesterday by the child's distraught mother, Mrs. Jean Elizabeth Shaw, 35, formerly of Clinton, Iowa, who previously had told incoherently about how "I gassed her . . . I poisoned her . . . I can't talk about it, it's too horrible."

Mrs. Shaw is held in the psychiatric ward of General Hospital on a technical booking of suspicion of murder.

Her sorrowing, divorced husband, Prentice W. Shaw, 42, Clinton attorney who flew here Saturday, probably will learn here Saturday what killed his daughter. Coroner's attendants said the little girl had been dead several days.

"Something made her decide to tell us," said Det. St. Harry Hansen. He said he took her to the vacant lot only a short distance from the apartment where she had been living with Susan and another daughter, Pamela, 11.

It was Pamela who last Wednesday told officers that something was wrong, that her mother had said her sister was dead. A search began. Shaw was notified and hastily came here.

Court Upholds Sentence of Copeland Is

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court today affirmed a two-year prison sentence against Joseph H. Copeland for operation of gambling house at "the Groves" a club near Forrest City.

In reviewing the evidence, the Supreme Court said raiding officers seized gambling equipment, including a roulette wheel.

The court said a crate which had contained the roulette wheel was found and that this crate had a shipping tag which bore Copeland's name and a Memphis address.

Byrd to Head Hempstead Cancer Drive

In a business meeting of the Hempstead County Cancer Society last week Claud Byrd, Hope jeweler, was selected to head the 1956 Cancer Fund Campaign for Hempstead County.

Mr. Byrd has set Monday April 16th as the opening day for the Fund Drive. This meeting of the Cancer Society was held in the home of Dr. J. W. Branch, Chairman of this Committee.

Attending this meeting was Mrs. Ernest Graham, County Commander, Harry Hawthorne, District Director, Syd McMath, Fund Treasurer, Mrs. E. P. O'Neal, Secretary, Mrs. Inez Compton, Publicity Chairman, Mrs. Theo Long, Surgical Dressing Chairman, Cecil Bittle, Mrs. Ernest Wingfield, and Claude Byrd, 1956 Fund Chairman.

Extensive plans were made for the Fund Drive, and for the educational phase of the American Cancer Society. Mrs. Ernest Graham, County Commander, gave an interesting report of the work of her committees on the educational program, with Mrs. Steve Carriag, Chairman of the Adult workers, and Mrs. Hinton Davis, Chairman of the youth group. A fine job has been accomplished by these committees in alerting people to the danger signals of Cancer, and what to do about them.

Within the next few days Mr. Byrd will announce further plans for the Fund Drive, and the volunteer workers in this campaign. The 1956 slogan for the American Cancer Society, is "Fight Cancer With a Check-Up, and a Check."

Man Suffers Stroke After Seeing Blast

HARRISON (AP)—A 70-year-old farmer has confirmed theories that he suffered a stroke while on his way to report a fatal dynamite blast and lay exposed to frosty weather for two nights.

Sheriff Spence Holder yesterday quoted John Green as saying that he heard a huge explosion about 1 p. m. last Thursday. Green, who is expected to recover, said that he found the remains of Chester Dalia Flowers, 34, and a hole in the ground where Flowers had been dynamiting a stump.

Green said that he took Flowers' truck and started to notify authorities. He was stricken as he stepped out of the truck to open a barnyard gate.

Green was unable to talk when he was discovered Saturday morning. His left side is paralyzed, but doctors at a hospital here said that he would recover.

Holder said that Green was unable to supply any clues as to how the accident occurred. The sheriff said that apparently the jolt from a dynamite explosion under a stump set off a case of dynamite nearby.

Flowers' remains were scattered over a 300-yard area. Searchers found parts of his wallet and other personal effects.

Jurists Uphold Garland Court

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court today upheld Garland Chancery court in refusing the plea of a husband to set aside a divorce his wife had obtained from a former husband and thereby in effect void his own marriage.

Leon Weill contended that Estelle Goldstein Price Weill had obtained a divorce from Daniel H. Price with the aid of fraudulent representations that she was a resident of Arkansas.

In denying Weill's appeal, the Supreme Court said "the right to have an invalid divorce decree set aside ordinarily exists only in favor of the injured spouse." Weill was not a party to the divorce action.

Cleburn Paul Cissell, aged 81, a retired farmer and grocer of Hempstead, died Friday in a Little Rock hospital. Survivors include a son, William R. Cissell of Hope, a daughter, Mrs. Paulette Long of Ballou, Calif. Funeral and burial was scheduled to be held Monday at Harrisburg, Ill.

Egypt Claims 'Many Israelis' Killed in Clash

JERUSALEM (Israeli Sector). — (UP) Egyptian military authorities announced today in Cairo that "many Israelis" were killed and wounded in a new clash near the Gaza strip truce line.

Four days of fighting in the Gaza area last week already had brought the Middle East close all out war. More than 60 persons were killed in those clashes.

The Egyptian announcement today gave few details. It said two Egyptian soldiers were wounded in the new encounter and that "many Israelis" were killed and wounded.

Israel complained to the United Nations only hours before that Egyptian suicide squads struck throughout Israel early today in a series of terror raids. Israel condemned the raids as "acts of aggression."

Israeli reports said one Egyptian was killed and another wounded today in an exchange of fire with an Israeli army patrol. The Egyptians were believed members of a commando group operating across the border.

Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, U. N. truce supervisor, sent word last night to Egyptian Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser demanding an unconditional and immediate halt to the commando raids. Otherwise he said Egypt risked being branded an "aggressor."

Joseph Tekoa, Israeli foreign office spokesman, denied reports Israel had served a 48-hour ultimatum on Nasser threatening retaliation unless the commando operations were stopped.

The Cairo military spokesman said an Israeli motorized patrol crossed the truce demarcation line in the Deirbelah region south of Gaza shortly after midnight and tried to penetrate deep into Egyptian territory.

Planes Supply Base in the Frozen Arctic

By ELTON C. FAY, APMilitary Reporter

AT AN ARCTIC RADAR SITE — Ninety tons of airplane and cargo ease down to the ice runway of a lake, 1,000 miles from civilization.

Another load of freight is delivered in the race to build the Distant Early Warning Line, called the "Dewline."

By military and commercial aircraft, by ship, by tractor-drawn sled trains, close to 200,000 tons of material has been toted in the last year to build the warning line along the 3,000 miles at the top of the American continent.

When Dewline is ready, perhaps as much as two years from now, it may provide a plane-proof electronic sentry system standing watch for air invaders.

The eastern end of Dewline will be on Baffin Island, across from Greenland.

The western end is at Cape Lisburne, Alaska, about 200 miles southwest of Point Barrow. The cape is only about 200 miles from an eastern tip of Siberia, only 100 miles from the international boundary which extends out into the Arctic Ocean from Bering Strait.

Newsmen who traveled the 3,000 mile stretch of Dewline asked if it would be possible for an aggressor to jam the system with electronic equipment.

Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, a deputy chief of staff of the U. S. Air Force which is building the line, says "there is no electronic emanation put out in space which can't be jammed." He says everything possible is being done to prevent jamming.

2-Car Wreck Leaves Four Injured Here

A two car accident at the South Main Street Y early last night left several persons injured and brought the arrest of one driver.

Investigating State and City Officers, said automobiles driven by Jessie Holmes, 56, Hope Negro, and Tom Scroggins of Patmos collided head-on. Holmes was going south and the Scroggins car was coming into Hope. Following the investigation officers placed a charge of driving while intoxicated against Holmes.

Mildred Palmer and Bertha Scroggins, riding with Scroggins, were shaken up but not believed seriously injured. George Plums received a severe cut on the scalp and Hollis Johnson a badly cut lip. Both were riding with Holmes.

The front end of both vehicles were smashed.

$745 Million More Asked for Defense

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Eisenhower today asked Congress for an additional $745,000,000 in defense funds for the year starting next July 1.

The supplemental funds are mainly for a speedup in production of B52 jet bombers, the mainstay of the U. S. atomic weapons air fleet, and additional bases for Strategic Air Command which files the giant planes.

Further development of the Distant Early Warning program and additional ship conversion also are contemplated together with minor increases in Army and Navy strength.

The White House, in announcing the appropriation request, said:

"These additional appropriations will not increase estimated expenditures for the Department of Defense during the fiscal year 1957 by more than 400 million dollars. Therefore they will not unbalance the 1957 budget, since a surplus of over 400 million dollars was estimated."

Farm Showdown Faces Returning Congressmen

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower told Republican congressional leaders today that the farm bill does not meet "the test of a good bill." They promised a battle to change it.

House GOP Leader Martin of Massachusetts told newsmen after a White House conference that an effort will be made, probably Wednesday, to send the bill back to a Senate-House conference committee.

"I'm quite hopeful we are going to recommit the bill," he said. Martin said no decision has been reached yet on just what changes will be sought in event the measure can be handed back to the special Senate-House conference committee which whipped the bill into compromise form last week.

But he indicated strongly that one aim will be to knock out high rigid price supports for basic commodities. The matter of "incentives" to the "conferees" Martin said will be thrashed out at a session of all House Republicans he has called for tomorrow afternoon.

Martin, senate Republican Leader Knowland of California, and the party whips, Sen. Saltonstall of Illinois, huddled with Eisenhower and Secretary of Agriculture Benson for nearly 2½ hours.

Afterward Martin read a brief typed statement to reporters: "The President repeated his desire to have a good farm bill promptly. He has been asking for it since Jan. 9, when he sent his farm message to the Congress."

"The President does not believe the conference report meets the test of a good bill. He is concerned that the conference report bill will not give the real and permanent assistance which is necessary for the security of our farm families and all Americans."

"In the House we shall try to recommit the measure with . . ."

structions, so that the conferees may have another chance at drafting a bill which will help, rather than hurt, farmers; which will eliminate the buildup of huge surpluses that have been depressing farm prices, and are depressing farm prices, and which have been denying farmers their fair share of our prosperity.

Martin and Knowland said that Eisenhower didn't say specifically whether he would veto the bill if it is accepted by Congress in its present form.

But Martin added that the President would "be a little shaky about doing anything else."

Martin said that he is going to be busy on conferences on the farm bill from now until Wednesday, talking with Democrats as well as Republicans. He said that "a goodly number" of Democrats will support the attempt to return the measure to the conference committee.

And Martin added, he "latch string is out for any other Democrats who want to go along."

Martin said he didn't know whether the GOP could make any headway with 21 Republicans who favor high rigid price supports.

Benson said Saturday after a meeting with Eisenhower that the bill was "unacceptable to me."

The conferees voted to supplant the administration's present flexible price support program with mandatory supports at 90 per cent of parity, multiple price plans for wheat and rice, mandatory price supports for feed grains, and other features which the President has termed objectionable in the past.

But the bill also includes Eisenhower's own proposal for a "soil bank," under which farmers would receive up to $1,200,000 a year for taking surplus cropland out of production.

Although Eisenhower has taken no formal stand on the compromise bill, Sen. Aiken (R-Vt.) and others have said it faces a presidential veto unless Congress modifies its proposals to bring them more in line with the principles enshrined by the administration.

In advance of the White House conference House GOP leader Martin of Massachusetts told newsmen the bill is "unsatisfactory as it stands."

House GOP strategy is to send the bill back to the conference group "with instructions." That requires a majority of the House to vote for a substitute which would be acceptable to the President. Eisenhower said last week he would be satisfied with something less than "perfection."

House procedure allows for only one hour of debate before the vote.

Strengthening expectations of a Republican compromise offer, Sen. Aiken (R-Vt.) told newsmen a substitute "might be approved" which would provide for price supports at 82½ to 85 per cent of parity in place of rigid 90 per cent supports. Parity is a price determined under farm law to be fair to farmers in relation to their costs.

Rep. Burdick (R-ND), however, predicted "the House will pass the bill and the President will sign it."

His prediction was echoed by Democratic farm leaders in both House and Senate, who said they could muster the vote to pass the compromise bill and send it to Eisenhower on an "all or nothing" basis.

Predicts Ike to Veto Farm Bill

INDIANAPOLIS, (UP) — A close associate predicts President Eisenhower will veto the compromise farm bill.

"It is a whole collection of contradictions," Presidential assistant Howard Pyle told the Hoosier State Press association this week-end. "I don't see how he can sign it in its present form."

The former Arizona governor explained the administration "wants more emphasis on the production-cutting soil bank."

"Too many congressional leaders are pushing for surplus-inducing high parities on commodities," he added.

street address. The money box contained only $70.80, but Copeland had $2,950 in his pockets, the court said.

Copeland was convicted by a St. Francis Circuit Court jury after his arrest Aug. 26, 1955.

He appealed on several grounds, including one that the presiding judge should have instructed the jury as a matter of law that he "was innocent and another that a ledger which the state said showed gambling profits and losses wrongfully was admitted as evidence. The Supreme Court turned him down on all points.

Dr. Martin M. Roberts, a Fort Smith dentist, lost an effort to have custody of his three children given to him rather than to his divorced wife Peggy, who now is married to Army Maj. George W. Jerome, stationed at El Paso Tex.

The ruling upheld Sebastian Chancery Court.

When Dr. and Mrs. Roberts were divorced in January, 1954, Mrs. Roberts was given custody of the children on condition that she not remove them from Sebastian County. Later, over Dr.

Roberts' protest, the decree was modified to permit the mother to take the children to El Paso. Provision was made for the children to visit Dr. Roberts during summer vacations.

Phillips Circuit Court was affirmed in it award of year's benefits under a sick and accident insurance policy in favor of Daisy English. One of her legs was amputated when gangrene developed after she stepped on a roofing tack.

Fidelity Reserve Insurance Co. contended it should not have to pay under terms of the policy Mrs. English had. Mrs. English had hardening of the arteries without which the wound would not have become gangrenous. The court said the injury is covered if the accident precipitates the disability even though the condition would not have occurred without the contributing effect of a pre-existing disease.

The decree of Columbia Chancery Court in settling mineral rights to 63 acres of land between conflicting claims of Jewell Edwards and others and Carter Oil Co. was upheld.

Each side appealed, contending it was due a larger share.

Batesville-Floral area: Market weak and unsettled; demand fair. Broilers and fryers 19-20 cents. All prices f. o. b. farm.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK (UP) — Cotton futures were mostly lower today in slow dealings. Nearby July showed independent strength on trade buying and commission house demand, sparked at the start of trading by purchases of about 3,000 bales of that delivery by one broker. The market was hesitant because of confusion over Washington farm bill developments.

Later afternoon prices were 80 cents a bale higher to 60 cents lower than the previous close. May 35.63, July 33.57 and October 32.44.

POULTRY AND PRODUCE

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK (UP) — Buying in the aircrafts was one of the main supports today in the Stock Market's advance.

Demand for aircrafts came with President Eisenhower's request to Congress for more than a half billion dollars of additional money for defense.

Prices in the early afternoon were up around 2 points at the outside. At the same time there were losses of that size in a few places.

ST. LOUIS LIVESTOCK

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, ILL. ## Julie London to Stay With the Movies

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD — For seven years, Julie London played the role of wife of TV star Jack Webb and mother of his children. Then suddenly her world fell apart. Jack and Julie were divorced, and she ended up with a large share of his "Dragnet" millions. But money wasn't everything. "I was unsettled," she recalls. "I think anybody would be if the way they had been living for seven years was suddenly upset."

She complained of her restlessness to Bobby Troup, leader of a jazz combo and her constant companion since the divorce. "You need to go to work," he replied. He tried to persuade her to try a singing career. She resisted. Before her marriage to Webb, she had been a contract player with various studios, but she hadn't sung since she had been a teenager.

One night she and Troup were in an intimate Sunset Strip bistro. "If I ever to ding in a club, I'd like a place like this," she commented. He forced the issue by booking her into the place, opening eight weeks later.

She had to hurry, but she made the opening date. And a whole new career started to blossom for her.

Out of her engagement came an offer to record for Liberty records. She put the budding company on the map with her "Cry Me A River," which sold 800,000 records. Her album, "Julie Is Her Name," was the No. 1 seller for five weeks and has been among the top 10 for months.

Several other night club engagements followed, and now Julie is resuming her film career. She is playing an important sequence in "The Great Man." She portrays an alcoholic singer who is interviewed for a memorial program to a top radio emcee who had been killed in an auto crash. Director-star Jose Fetter reported she was doing great work.

What does the future hold for her?

"No more night clubs," she said. "They were great for getting my career started. But now I want to stick to records and pictures."

Alice gazed at the envelope as if it were a coiled snake.

CHAPTER I

Alice took off her jacket as she stood on the terrace and let the warmth of the June sun penetrate her thin blouse. It was the first time she had felt alive since John's death, 10 days ago.

The sun's light became a stage effect without warmth or cheer. She turned and went into the empty house. You've put it off long enough. You must go through his desk now.

Light lanced through a great window and gilded the broad, oak stairs. She went up slowly, one hand on the balustrade. John, who no longer existed, was more real than the touch of sun-warmed wood.

In the shadows, at the head of the stairs, sudden movement caught her eye. She gasped but it was only her own reflection in the long glass that hung there. She hardly glanced at the stranger the mirror presented. A slender woman in cloudy white — John disliked mourning. A face oval and aquiline framed in smooth coil of brown hair veined with gray at the hollowed, fragrant temples. Thoughtful eyes set deeply under arching brows.

She crossed the upstairs hall to John's study and sat down at his desk in the glaring, unreal sunshine. An old desk, carved oak, with three large drawers and a dropleaf. John's personal desk, a wedding present to him from her own father. She knew there were no official papers here. The few he had brought to this house had been kept in the wall safe. The evening he died, a young man from the State Department flew up from Washington and carried them off in a padlocked brief case, chained to his wrist.

The large drawers first. Note-paper, typewriting paper, carbon, bank statements, canceled checks, receipted bills. All in order, each debt aid, each record filed precisely, as John did everything.

In the pigeonholes above the dropleaf were a few current bills and unanswered letters. She dropped the letters in the scrapbasket.

Among the pigeonholes were two small drawers. She and John had both kept old letters in the one on the right for many years. The telegram from John's mother when John's only child, Malcolm, was born 19 years ago. Alice laid it tenderly aside.

She reached for the little drawer on the left.

Her hand dropped as if it had been stung. John never locked drawers in his own home. There were no secrets in his family life. But this drawer was locked.

She took her handbag from the table. There were two key rings in it now — John's and her own. She looked at his closely. Two front door keys, this house and the winter home in Washington. Three car keys — her car and his and the station wagon. One small key she had never noticed before. She tried it in the lock of the little drawer. It turned.

Slowly she pulled out the drawer. Rubber bands, paper clips and a large envelope made of thin, foreign-looking paper, in a sickly shade of pale green. It was tied up like a package with rather dingy, red string. It was light in her hand. At first she didn't see any inscription. Then it tilted in her shaking hand and graphite on its surface caught the sun obliquely with a faint, grayish gray sheen. There were five words, lightly penciled in John's small, neat hand: Papers Pertaining to Miss Lash.

Alice gazed at the envelope as if it were a coiled snake. The ugly green of the alien paper, the dirty, red string, the enigmatic inscription and the locked drawer — all fused in a flash of dismay. This is something John would have burned, if he had known he was going to die. Something he had to keep that yet did not want anyone to see, even his own wife. Something scandalous. Or dangerous.

Destroy it unopened?

Suppose she were wrong. Suppose it was something that John himself would have wanted her to know, now he was no longer alive. Something she should know for her own protection and Malcolm's.

When had she last seen the drawer open and empty?

The last week in May, when she came up from Washington to supervise the spring cleaning of this Connecticut house. John himself hadn't come up from Washington until the first of June. He must have brought the green envelope with him then. And only three days later he had died.

Miss Lash. She couldn't recall the name among their wide acquaintance, here and in Europe.

She looked up and saw him standing in the doorway. At 19 all his growth had gone into height. He was slender and supple and boyishly unconscious of his own grace as he lounged in the doorway, sunshine glancing from hair like polished sandalwood.

"Did I leave my racket in here? Mother! Tears?" He came forward to take her hand. She pressed her knuckles against her cheek and forced a smile. He must not guess that there was a new bitterness in the taste of her grief. She rose.

"Forgive me. I know it distresses you."

"Never mind me — if it makes things easier for you to cry."

"I don't believe it does, really."

She took out one of the fine handkerchiefs she had got in London before the war and dried her eyes. "Let's talk about you," she said. "Charles Morgan has written me that he can make a place for you in his department when you're graduated. Interested?"

He frowned. "Government? I think not. I saw what it did to Father."

"What do you mean?"

"It hardened him. The mean jealousies, the backbiting and gossip."

"There was never any gossip about your father."

"How do you know?" He laughed indulgently. "The victim's wife is always the last to hear."

"And the victim's son?"

"People say things in front of the young as if we were all deaf. Of

"This is utter nonsense. I have never planned to bring a water show to Egypt and can't understand what they are talking about."

WASHINGTON — Sen. Estes Kefauver on the threat of violence in the South because of the Supreme Court school desegregation decision:

"America will remain strong only under law and order. . . . I cannot achieve it great promise unless mutual problems are settled with good will by all of the people, She's downstairs now."

"Bring her up at once," Alice smiled heroically. This was one moment when she must not fail her son — hard as it might be. They always did it, of course. They always sought the stranger, the unknown and adventurous, and went blindly past the daughter of old friends. After all, she had done the same sort of thing when she married John.

Malcolm had gone. She stood waiting for the first sound of returning footsteps, one hand clenched over a tight ball of damp handkerchief. This would never do. She must relax. If only John were here to judge and advise.

Footsteps, at last, and young, light voices. They stood in the doorway — Malcolm and a girl. No, not a girl; a woman with the used face and cool assurance of experienced maturity. She had a ballerina's body, muscular and supple, and Tartar eyes — slanting, dark, brilliant and pitiless as the eyes of a hawk. Her swarthy skin was set off by a stark white tennis dress and scarlet lipstick.

"Mother," said Malcolm, clearly and happily. "This is Cristina Lash."
